The University of Michigan Wolverines blue line took a hit over the weekend when sophomore defenseman Johnny Druskinis was removed from the program just one day before the start of the 2023 regular season for a rules violation, as first reported by the Michigan Daily.

A report from CBS Detroit, which has video of the incident, alleges one male and one female defaced the university's Jewish Resource Center with "homophobic slurs and graphic images." According to the official X account of StopAntisemitism.org, Druskinis allegedly vandalized the building, spray painting it with swastikas.

While the school didn't clarify what exactly he did, it did confirm Druskinis is no longer a member of the hockey team, and his roster page was removed from the school's website.

"Johnny Druskinis is no longer on the Michigan Hockey roster, following a violation of team rules," a Michigan hockey spokesperson said in a statement.

Druskinis played sparingly as a freshman last season, notching two assists in eight games. He was projected to be a third-pairing defender for the Wolverines in 2023.
